

Grenada

[REDACTED] Prime Minister Bishop formed a seven-man cabinet on Sunday, reserving for himself the security, foreign affairs, and information portfolios. He also suspended the constitution, stating that Grenada would function under 10 "people's laws" for "several months" until a new constitution is submitted to a popular referendum. Bishop said Grenada would remain in the British Commonwealth and the Caribbean Common Market and continue to regard Queen Elizabeth II as titular head of state. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Bishop's moves apparently rule out quick elections and efforts to provide a constitutional shield for the takeover by his New Jewel Movement. [REDACTED]
